Buick Achievers Scholarship Program

Amount: $100,000 over four years (multiple winners)

The Buick Achievers Scholarship Program was founded to recognize and reward students who have succeeded both inside and outside of the classroom, especially those who may not have the opportunity to attend college without financial assistance. In 2014 the program awarded 100 renewable scholarships of up to $25,000 per year. Since the program's founding in 2011, it has provided more than $28 million to 3,400 students choosing to study in science, technology, engineering, math, design and select business fields.

The Buick Achievers Scholarship Program is one of the largest in the country. Since its inception in 2011, the program has provided over $28 million to nearly 3,400 students desiring to study STEM fields, as well as those related to the auto industry. Many of the recipients are the first in their families to pursue a secondary education.

The Buick Achievers Scholarship Program supports students interested in pursuing careers in the automotive and related industry and who will be studying science, technology, engineering, math, design and select business fields. This comes at a time when STEM occupations are projected to grow faster than all other fields, and yet just 16 percent of American high school seniors are proficient in mathematics and interested in a STEM career, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

As one of the largest scholarship programs in the country, the Buick Achievers Scholarship is distinguished by its renewable aspect - 100 nationwide students receive up to $25,000 a year, renewable for up to four years and one additional year for qualified five-year engineering programs.

For more information on the Buick Achievers Scholarship Program, to view the complete list of 2014 recipients, or to register for an e-mail notification when the next application window opens, visit www.buickachievers.com

1. Internships at Apple and Exxon Mobile help pay for college

Internships that could help pay for college

While you're in school, paid internships can provide the money you need for some, most, or all of your tuition. However, even unpaid internships can pay dividends, as having a successful internship experience is going to make you much more marketable to employers in today's competitive job market – and possibly mean the difference between getting a job after graduation or not. After all, a job is certainly going be handy when it comes time to pay back your student loans!

Internships During School

While you're still in school, internships typically provide one or two major benefits: preparation for work after graduation and/or money for college. If you need help paying for school, working in a paid internship program is the best way to solve that problem while also enhancing your resume for your post-graduation job search. In fact, the latter benefit is a major advantage to taking on an internship rather than a traditional work-study program. So do your homework and look for opportunities as early as you can.

When looking for a paid internship program for your summer break, your best bet is to find one in an affordable location where your living expenses aren't more than what you're earning! The goal is to have more money than what you started with. If possible, look for paid internships in your hometown so that you can live at home and save on rent and utilities.

Your hourly rate as an intern is going to vary greatly by your employer. Determine what your salary or stipend is going to be upfront (ideally, before you accept or apply for the position) and calculate how much you'll make after taxes are taken out. Make sure to put aside enough of this money to help you cover your living expenses through the year, or put it toward your tuition for the following semester!

Where can we find unclaimed scholarships
Private Scholarships: Source of Unclaimed Scholarships
Private scholarships provide full or partial tuition assistance but are only open to students who meet selective criteria. Some colleges and universities offer scholarships for various majors, including common disciplines as well as highly specialized ones. The college financial aid office provides information to interested students along with the appropriate application forms.Some companies offer scholarship money to families through the workplace as part of the company's benefit plan. Parents should check with their Human Resources department to see if tuition reimbursement or scholarships are offered for dependent children. This type of scholarship falls most frequently into the "unclaimed scholarship" category. The reason is simple. If not enough people at the company have children embarking on their college education, monies set aside for the fund remain untapped in that particular year.

Other private scholarships come from groups, clubs, civic associations, churches or other groups. They may have special criteria for the scholarship, such as scholarships for minorities or geographically based scholarships.
